

ABSTRACT

A search system has a plurality of resources, including data resources and query and result processing resources. The search system determines the selection and ordering of resources at run-time through a combination of pre-defined default rules and a search strategy that is associated with each search.

5